You might have noticed some changes to our allergy injection practices. These changes were made to ensure the most convenient, efficient and accurate patient experience possible.

Allergy compounds will no longer be produced in-house. Instead, your allergy extract prescription will be sent to Edge Pharma – the largest compounder of allergy vials in the United States – where each batch of allergy extract is produced in a sterile environment following the strictest FDA-sanctioned quality regulations.

You may see some changes in your allergy shot schedule initially due to this transition and for your safety.

Further safety and accuracy mechanisms have been set in place for allergy injections, including personalized bar-coded printed labels for each patient’s allergy vial. This reduces the possibility of error by connecting each vial to the correct patient.

The testing process is fully integrated with our Epic Electronic Health Records system, which allows patients to access their test results through their online account as soon as they are completed.

Each step in the process is complimented by XTRACT Solutions, a comprehensive allergy immunotherapy software system that further enhances safety measures, and is fully integrated with each patient’s Epic Electronic Health Record and the efforts of Edge Pharma.

These new protocols heighten the quality and safety of patient tests and injections while improving efficiency.

For more information, visit WatsonClinic.com/Allergy.
To schedule an appointment with a Watson Clinic Allergy specialist, call 863-680-7486 (Main) or 863-647-4045 (South). For more information, visit WatsonClinic.com/Allergy.