

Low Residue Diet

This information along with other educational material is available on our website at www.WatsonClinic.com/GynOnc

A low residue diet is a diet that decreases the movement and volume of stool in the intestines. It is therefore typically recommended for patients who have frequent and/or loose bowel movements due to radiation damage or inflammatory bowel disease.

Dietary fiber from plants is not completely digested by humans and leaves a residue in the intestines. Thus, a low residue diet typically contains less than 10-15 grams of fiber per day, and in essence is a low fiber diet with additional restrictions on certain dairy products and prune juice as these all can increase bowel activity. Long-term use of this diet may lead to some vitamin or mineral deficiencies and supplementation of vitamin C, calcium, and folic acid may be required.
